

Southpoint retail goes market-style

THE Anthony John Group's $600 million Southpoint development will have more than 4500sq m of retail space.

The development, which is over two levels and will be Flight Centre's global base, will be delivered in mid-2016.

Anchor tenant Woolworths already has 1200sq m on a 20-year lease, giving South Bank its first major supermarket, while the rest will be a mixture of fresh food, dining and boutique retail options.

Anthony John Group chief executive Shane Bulloch said the planned retail is aligned to South Bank Corporation's vision for the site, creating a village-style market atmosphere that services commuters, workers, students and residents.

Helping create a striking entry statement will be the heritage-listed Collins Place, which will be refurbished and used again, as it was during World Expo 88, as a destination restaurant.
